One Easter morning, Megan woke up to complete silence. She stared up at the ceiling with a broadened smile from ear to ear! Today was Easter and she was excited to go look at what she got! So she wiggled out of bed, crept down the stairs as quietly as she could and tip-toed over to the living room.

All of a sudden she heard a CREEAAKK. Megan stopped in her tracks. She looked up the stairs but she couldn’t see enough so she scrambled over to the railing. “BOO!”
Megan’s heart was racing and she could feel fear rising up in her body. She was about to scream when she realized it was only her brothers, John and Ralph. “What was that for?” said Megan, “You guys are gonna wake Mom and Dad up!” She stared at her two brothers and waited impatiently with her hands on her hips for their answer. Finally, John spoke up and said “We just wanted to scare you….and not wake up Mom and Dad.” Megan’s shoulders slumped. She felt kind of bad for her brothers but she didn’t like it when they scared her like that! “We’re sorry Megan.” They both said all embarrassed with their hands behind their backs, looking down. “It’s ok. I’ll forgive you under one condition: NO SCARING ME LIKE THAT EVER AGAIN!” Megan whisper-shouted. Then they all hurried downstairs to find out what the Easter Bunny had brought them. When they saw the gifts they all squealed with delight!
Then they ran around the house looking for Easter eggs! But what they found was not what they wanted to see. All of the eggs didn’t have names on them like last year! So they didn’t know which eggs were theirs!

“What are we gonna do now?” asked Ralph with his mouth open and hands on his cheeks. “Maybe we can go wake up Mom and Dad now!” said Megan hurrying up the stairs. She crept into their parents’ bedroom as quietly as she could and went over to her Mom. “Mom, wake up.” Megan whispered into her Mom’s ear. “Huh? Oh good morning! What is it?” her Mom replied. “Just come downstairs.” Megan beckoned. “Alrighty!” her Mom replied.
Soon after, both of their parents were downstairs looking at the eggs. They both looked just as confused as the kids did. "I don't know kids," their Dad said. "I guess the Easter Bunny thought that you were old enough to share your Easter eggs this year!"

"What? No!" John shouted. He didn't want to share his Easter eggs!

Then their mom had an idea. "How about, you kids go and look around the house and collect all the Easter eggs you can find, then come back to the living room and we will divide the Easter eggs equally into three parts! Sound good?" their Mom suggested.

"Hmm. That sounds like a good idea Mom! Let's go boys!" Megan said excitedly.
So they got up and searched all around the house for eggs. They found them hiding in between legs of chairs, behind photo frames, tucked into corners, on the window sills, even up high on the light fixtures!

Once they had gathered all of the Easter eggs they brought them back to their Mom. "We found all of them!" shouted Ralph. "Great! Hand them to me." their Mom said with outstretched hands. They each gave her their eggs and she easily split them into three equal parts. After all the dividing was done the kids devoured almost all of their treats!
Suddenly, Megan remembered that they each had a whole basket full of treats and toys to explore!

In Megan's basket there was a skipping rope and a watercolor book! Her brother Ralph got a Lego Set and Kinetic Sand! Her brother John got a Nerf Gun and also Kinetic Sand.

They each got giant sized Kinder Eggs, a 500 piece puzzle to build together, and a fun sprinkler for the backyard! They spent the entire morning opening and enjoying their new gifts!

After they were done playing the whole family sat down and enjoyed a delicious Easter Brunch together, which was a tradition for their family.

Megan's heart felt full of happiness and she had a huge smile on her face. She hoped next Easter would be as wonderful as this year had turned out to be!
